In Vanuatu, over 300 people are facing eviction from a community on the island of Efate.

They have until June 14 to leave their homes and food gardens following an eviction order by a joint Vanuatu and Chinese owned fisheries company.

Members of the Malvatumauri Council of Chiefs, led by President Chief Paul Robert Ravun, visited the families at the area known as Salili, and said they would raise their concerns with Government.

"Some have already left," said local journalist Hiliare Bule.

"They are very emotional because they've lived in this area all their lives."
